

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An earphone-based voice transmission device. An earplug is placed inside a user's ear for collecting the voice generated by the eardrum. The voice is converted into an output electronic audio signal by a converter. Then, the output electronic audio signal is amplified and transmitted to a communication device for further transmission.